SIERRA CLUB LECTURE, APRIL 26

THE STIKINE THROUGH THE LENS OF A CAMERA: The Stikine, one of British Columbia's great rivers, rises in the Spatsizi Plateau Wilderness Provincial Park, in a broad subalpine valley frequented by caribou, moose, grizzly bears and wolves, and carpeted in summer with an abundance of wildflowers.

The Stikine was selected by Parks Canada, when they undertook their Wild River Survey in 1971-3, as a prime candidate for inclusion in a Canadian Wild Rivers System. To date no such system has been established, and meanwhile the future of the Stikine as a free-flowing waterway is threatened by the plans of B.C. Hydro to dam the river for electric power development.

With the aid of slides and movie sequences, the program will take the audience on a photographic journey from the source of the Stikine in the Spatsizi Park, to its mouth at Wrangell, Alaska.

Contributors to the program will be:

Rosemary Fox	Tommy Walker
Jurgen Lau	Klaus Streckmann
John Mikes	Jim Bourquin

8.00 p.m., Robson Square Theatre, 800 Robson Street, Vancouver
